Claroline: integrates self-correcting of questions of type MCQ, true or false, filling of white, correspondence.

2

Dokeos: construction tool and online training animation. Creating custom QUIZZ (similar to Claroline). Other options available but none in the field of programming.

3

Moodle: most used platform in the world of LMS (Learning Management System). File import / export for seamless communication between instructors and students. Ability to create a QUIZZ.

4

Chamilo: creation of exam with a controlled time. A diploma can be awarded to users.

Problèmes à résoudre

1

Download each compressed (zipped) project from different operating systems.

3

Manual entry of notes.

2

Launch of the program and correction of compilation or integration errors.

4

No version management integration (git).

Our objective

Badkan aims to improve the daily life of each instructor through its automatic correction platform.

Targeted users

Instructor as student are winners of using Badkan.

Two portals are integrated into the site. A student will not have access to course management, but will be able to submit their answers. An instructor has access to the management of his own courses.

Badkan is a website that brings together students and instructors in computer science and automatically corrects exercises prepared in advance by an instructor. Thus, any instructor using Badkan will gain correction time. Students receive immediate feedback (including a note) after submitting their responses. All in one platform with many options that make it easy for instructors and students.

Proposed solution

Today, a lone instructor spends 10 minutes of his time correcting a single IT project.

Imagine having to correct a class of 50 students.
